Collaborations between post secondary institutions is a welcome move towards excellence in higher education

Saikat Kumar Basu

Recently, in June the Geography Department, Lalbaba College at Belur Howrah successfully organized a one day international conference in collaboration with the Geography department of the Khudiram Bose Central College, Kolkata at their Belur campus. The conference theme was 'Geopolitics of Climate Change and It's Impact on Human-Biodiversity-Urban Environment'. This well attended and highly successful international conference is an outcome of a previously unheard of unique approach of the esteemed Lalbaba College in generating MoU and collaborating with other similar minded institutions such as Khudiram Bose Central College in exchanging resources and facilities, student and faculty exchange programs, joint scientific and cultural programs like seminars, symposiums, workshops, colloquium, research and social exchanges and presentations between both participating institutions. The honourable Principal of Lalbaba College, Prof Sanjay Kumar, mentioned, "Our goal is to establish MoU with at least 25 institutions, to help both educational, research as well as socio-cultural enrichments of students, faculties and administrators of participating institutions; and we are determined to achieve our target." This is a monumental approach and should be beacon for other educational institutes across the state of West Bengal and India to follow suit. The path set by these two premier institutes towards multi-institutional collaborative effort in education and research; as well sharing quality resources of both institutes to share their resources is an unique example of much needed focus towards highly neglected multidisciplinary research in India. It is therefore important to understand that such small steps synergistically can push forward our education system light years ahead of our age old, rusted and putrefied traditional concept of running post secondary institutions. Both Lalbaba College (Belur, Howrah) and the Khudiram Bose Central College (Kolkata) deserve special mention for their sincere efforts in making the conference highly successful. The Principals, governing body members, teacher's and student council members of both institutes deserve special credit and respect for bringing out such fruitful and exemplary collaborations forward. Agricultural scientist and environmentalist, Dr. Saikat Kumar Basu spoke about the 'Geopolitics of Climate Change and Biodiversity' illustrating with numerous examples and case studies from around the globe. He demonstrated through his erudite presentation how we are slowly being engulfed globally by poor political decisions, lack of political will to make positive changes and the dirty politics games hovering on our existing power structure around the world including India, making important decisions and adopting to policies that governs our lives and destiny.

He explained how politics is turning into a major game changer globally for Climate Change related issues; and how vulnerable we are as ordinary citizens becoming victims of the game of international geopolitics. The research conducted by the second speaker Dr. Ansar Khan from Geography Department (Lalbaba College) and his erudite presentation was greatly appreciated explaining how our cities are turning into unimaginable heat islands and their possible mitigation strategies. It is quite amazing that such a high quality research has been successfully conducted by Dr. Khan with his international collaborators from around the globe; and the products of the research are valuable for our future survival. The mesmerized audience continued their background highly supportive students, faculty members, college administrators and both Principals including the IQAC cells that deserve special mentioning. Two silent workers (faculty members) from the Department of Geography (Lalbaba

(Associate Professor, Department of Geography) who deserve special mention for their dedicated hardworking and tireless efforts to make this conference run smoothly. The speakers acknowledged the kind support, encouragement and appreciation received and mentioned that both look forward to attend another such interactive international seminars on both college campuses in the not so distant future. Both the honourable Principals, namely Dr. Sanjay Kumar (Lalbaba College) and Dr. Subir Kumar Dutta (Khudiram Bose Central College) must be commended for their monumental efforts in making this collaboration and international conference conducted into a grand success
